SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

Requiring Annual Employee Surveys

Section 1128 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2004 (Public Law 108-136, 5 U.S.C. 7101 note) requires each agency to conduct an annual survey of its employees "to assess—

- (1) Leadership and management practices that contribute to agency performance; and
- (2) Employee satisfaction with—
 - (A) Leadership policies and practices;
 - (B) Work environment;
 - (C) Rewards and recognition for professional accomplishment and personal contributions to achieving organizational mission;
 - (D) Opportunity for professional development and growth; and
 - (E) Opportunity to contribute to achieving organizational mission.

Prescribing Certain Survey Questions

The law requires OPM to "issue regulations prescribing survey questions that should appear on all agency surveys." In addition, the law requires agencies to make the survey results available to the public and post the results on their Web sites, unless the head of the agency determines that doing so would jeopardize or negatively impact national security.

To select the survey questions to prescribe in regulation, OPM survey staff identified questions from the 2002 Federal Human Capital Survey (FHCS) that meet one of the assessment requirements in law. OPM survey staff subjected those questions to a regression analysis to identify the questions with the highest correlation to leadership and management practices or employee satisfaction.

As a second step, OPM survey staff independently listed major components of human capital management and verified that OPM had selected at least one question in each area. As a result, OPM added questions that address security and performance appraisal.

Based on these considerations, staff applied judgment to pare the list down to 24 questions. The recommended questions were presented at a Chief Human Capital Officers Council meeting, as well as a meeting with interested agency stakeholders and survey staff. Analysis of the comments received resulted in the addition of one question and the slight modification of several others. Finally, OPM survey staff convened a panel of senior experts to review the list of questions. The panel added three questions to improve coverage of human capital management systems and to ensure the 28 questions selected comply with the law.

The assessment requirements in law are restated below, with the questions that meet each requirement identified by number in brackets [].

- (1) Leadership and management practices that contribute to agency performance [5, 6, 7, 11, 12, 13, 17, 20]; and
- (2) Employee satisfaction with [27];
 - (A) Leadership policies and practices [18, 19, 23, 25];
 - (B) Work environment [1, 10, 21, 22];
 - (C) Rewards and recognition for professional accomplishment and personal contributions to achieving organizational mission [14, 15, 24, 28];
 - (D) Opportunity for professional development and growth [2, 16, 26]; and
 - (E) Opportunity to contribute to achieving organizational mission [3, 4, 8, 9].

OPM may vary the composition of the survey questions from time to time. The questions published in 5 CFR part 250, subpart C, will remain valid until changed by OPM through the regulatory process. Agencies should prepare and conduct surveys in accordance with professionally accepted survey standards to: ensure results are of high quality (e.g., the agency uses a communication strategy to publicize the survey and has determined an appropriate survey sample); the survey adequately assesses employee satisfaction; and the processing protects respondent confidentiality. The Government Accountability Office (GAO) publication entitled "Developing and Using Questionnaires" (October 1993, GAO/PEMD-10.1.7) provides guidance for agency use. OPM will provide additional guidance to agencies on this topic.

Agency Discretion

Agencies retain discretion to decide who shall administer their surveys, how the information will be collected, and how the results will be made available to the public and posted on their Web sites. Agencies may contract with other agencies, including OPM, or other sources to conduct surveys, but are not required to do so.

Agencies may add survey questions, change the order of the questions, and “reverse” the order of responses, except for the “Do Not Know” response option, which should remain last.

Using Agency Results

Survey results will be used to compare data over time and across agencies. Further, the survey results will support the requirement that OPM “design a set of systems, including appropriate metrics, for assessing the management of human capital by Federal agencies,” as set forth in 5 U.S.C. 1103(c). OPM is preparing proposed regulations revising 5 CFR 250 to provide this design and appropriate metrics.

Data Collection

Data must be collected by December 31 of each calendar year. To coordinate and encourage the timely availability of agency survey results, OPM is establishing a date of no later than 120 days after an agency completes survey administration each year for posting survey results on agency Web sites, based on surveys conducted during that calendar year. OPM expects to issue final regulations in early 2006. Consequently, each agency will need to conduct its employee survey by December 31 of each calendar year, beginning with calendar year 2006, and post results no later than 120 days after survey administration is complete, as noted in the regulation.

Relationship to Federal Human Capital Survey

In years when OPM administers the Federal Human Capital Survey (FHCS), which will always include the survey questions prescribed in 5 CFR part 250, subpart C, it is anticipated agencies will choose to use the FHCS to comply with the requirement to survey employees for that calendar year. OPM ultimately expects to administer the FHCS in the fall of even-numbered years and to offer services to support agencies surveying their employees with the subpart C questions in the fall of odd-numbered years. To achieve a systematic 12-month interval with survey administrations ultimately accomplished each fall, and given the fact that surveys using subpart C questions will not be conducted in calendar year 2005, OPM plans to address the annual employee survey requirement for 2006 by administering the next FHCS in late spring 2006. In 2007, agencies could administer the subpart C questions in the fall. In future even-numbered calendar years, the FHCS would be administered in the fall.

Regulatory Flexibility Act

I certify that this regulation will not have a significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities because it affects only certain Federal employees.
