SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:I. Background

The timely dissemination of communications about recalls of FDA regulated products, important drug safety information, and other important product safety information is essential for the protection of the public health. We have encouraged manufacturers to provide such information in a timely manner to distributors, doctors, and others. Over the years, we have worked with manufacturers to promote the use of electronic methods of communication and encourage the use of innovative technologies to disseminate safety information, particularly those that provide a public health benefit. We are making clear in the draft guidance that manufacturers may disseminate the communications discussed in §§ 7.49 and 200.5 (21 CFR 7.49 and 200.5) by e-mail or other electronic methods. The draft guidance also applies to those instances, not addressed in any regulation, where we recommend that manufacturers and distributors voluntarily convey certain safety information about their products to members of the public.

The use of e-mail and other electronic communications has dramatically changed how we and the public convey information. Electronic communications have a number of advantages over paper-based communications. They can significantly shorten the time between an event and the public's knowledge of the event. When the event involves product safety, it is even more important that accurate safety information be transmitted rapidly. E-mail and other electronic communications are generally considered more efficient and more timely than regular or traditional mail. These communications involve considerably less cost to the sender than older, more traditional delivery services. Verification of receipt or delivery is less expensive and can be automatically accomplished. Any necessary followup (such as when receipt of the e-mail is not acknowledged) also can be accomplished electronically. If receipt is never acknowledged, the sender can resort to more traditional methods of notification.

We interpret the provisions of §§ 7.49 and 200.5 to allow the use of e-mail and other electronic communication methods, such as fax or text messaging, to accomplish any recall notification or distribution of important safety information. Section 7.49(b) provides
