

entries subject to the deposit rate set in that review is de minimis. While those circumstances did not exist in the prior review, we have considered Hynix's request again in this review.

We preliminarily determine that the information submitted by Hynix supports the requested adjustment to the cash deposit rate. The information needed to calculate the adjustment, i.e., a subsidy of zero for the allocated subsidy that expired in the POR, is derived entirely from this POR. Also, removal of the subsidy for the expired program results in an ad valorem rate of 0.07 percent, which is de minimis (see 19 CFR 351.106(c)(1)). Therefore, we preliminarily find that if our preliminary subsidy calculations remain unchanged for the final results, merchandise produced and/or exported by Hynix will not be subject to cash deposits of estimated countervailing duties because the countervailing duty rate is de minimis.
