SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

Background

The statutory and regulatory background is described in detail in the Federal Register proposed rule of October 19, 2009 (74 FR 53445). In that document, EPA proposed to find HFO-1234yf acceptable as an alternative refrigerant for motor vehicle air conditioning, subject to use conditions. The refrigerant discussed in the proposed action, for which the comment period is reopened, is a non-ozone-depleting substance.

This Action

EPA has received a request for an extension to the comment deadline for this proposed rule.

This action reopens the comment period. The Agency will consider additional comments we receive through February 24, 2010 in response to this action. Note that additional information is available in the public docket, EPA-HQ-OAR-2008-0664, since publication of the October 19, 2009 proposed rule and a subsequent notice reopening the public comment period (December 28, 2009; 74 FR 68558). EPA will also consider comments received by February 24, 2010 in response to the previous Federal Register publication [EPA-OAR-2008-0664] before issuing a final regulatory determination for HFO-1234yf. We intend to issue a regulatory determination as expeditiously as possible following consideration of the comments and information we receive.

Dated: February 3, 2010.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: The Public Safety and Homeland Security Bureau invites public comment on the petition for rulemaking filed on November 12, 2009, by the California Public Utilities Commission (“CPUC”). The CPUC petitions the Commission, pursuant to Section 1.401 of the Commission’s rules, requesting that the Federal Communications Commission (Commission or FCC) grant State public utilities commissions direct access to the Commission’s Network Outage Reporting System (NORS) database. The CPUC also informally requests, pursuant to Section 1.41 of the Commission’s rules, that the Commission act to allow the CPUC password-protected access to the NORS database that is “limited to California-specific disruption and outage data.”

NORS is the Web-based filing system through which certain communications providers submit reports to the Commission of disruptions to communications as required by part 4 of the Commission’s rules. Reports of service disruptions filed in NORS are presumed to be confidential. Currently, the Commission shares NORS data only with the Department of Homeland Security (DHS).

CPUC states that the Commission found that mandatory reporting of network outages was “the only reliable way to collect this important information for use by this Commission and, where appropriate, for other government entities.” The CPUC asserts that, during the part 4 rulemaking proceeding, no State public utility commission requested access to the part 4 service disruption data and the Commission did not address whether it should or would grant State public utilities commissions the same direct access to the NORS reports that it provided to DHS.

CPUC states that because the public health and safety, as well as California’s economy, depend heavily on reliable and well functioning wireline and wireless voice and data communications networks, it is critical that the CPUC have access to the same level of service outage detail found in NORS reports in order to effectively analyze the data. CPUC adds that State commissioners, like the FCC, are responsible for overseeing the reliability and security of their State’s respective communications infrastructures and, in times of crisis, local and State authorities are often the first responders. CPUC states that, because of this, California has adopted

“the FCC’s NORS requirements” and implemented safeguards to ensure the confidentiality of the information received.

CPUC asserts that its goal is to obtain the data necessary to perform its “traditional role of protecting public health and safety through monitoring of communications network functionality” without requiring duplicative reporting by telecommunications providers. Acknowledging national security concerns, it seeks to allow states access to the NORS database if they can show that appropriate protections are in place that would ensure that the confidentiality of the data is maintained.

The petition for rulemaking is available for public inspection and copying in the Commission’s Reference Center, Room CY-A257, 445 12th Street, SW., Washington, DC 20554.
