

the normal course of business, give rise to the potential for significant impacts and therefore does not necessitate the preparation of an EA (or an EIS).

The frequency of property disposals by the Postal Service has increased dramatically in recent years. For example, the total number of Postal Service facilities fell from 34,175 in 2008 to 32,604 in 2012 (U.S. Postal Service 2012 Sustainability Report (2013)). The Postal Service anticipates that the frequency of property disposals will persist or increase in the foreseeable future. As a result, the Postal Service would reduce paperwork and delay by updating its CATEX to clarify that an EA is not required for the overwhelming majority of its normal course of business property disposals. That determination is based on the Postal Service's experience that such disposals do not normally result in significant environmental effects.

The Postal Service's NEPA procedural safeguards will continue to apply to the Postal Service's application of the amended CATEX. Specifically, the Postal Service's NEPA regulations require that all proposed real property actions, including property disposals, be reviewed using a process that includes the completion of a Facilities Environmental Checklist (FEC). The FEC allows the Postal Service's personnel and consultants to identify and list any potential environmental effects of the proposed action. The FEC's signatory determines whether the proposed action qualifies for a CATEX under NEPA and whether extraordinary circumstances exist that could cause the proposed action to have a significant environmental effect that would preclude the use of the CATEX.

If the person completing the FEC concludes that a CATEX applies, then a Record of Environmental Consideration (REC)—a formal record justifying the use of a CATEX—must be completed and signed by both the project manager and a responsible official at the Postal Service. The REC's signatories must affirm they have reviewed the applicable NEPA guidance and considered the environmental impacts of the proposed property action.

The Postal Service's experience leads it to believe that, as demonstrated by the GSA's and USCG's use of their property disposal CATEXs, its amended CATEX reflects an appropriate and realistic view that such activities undertaken in the normal course of business do not individually or cumulatively have significant impacts on the human environment. The Postal Service also finds those agencies' experience and consideration to be a useful guide. Like the Postal Service, both agencies are responsible for the acquisition and disposal of Federal property. GSA, which is responsible for the acquisition and disposal of most Federal property, has promulgated a property disposal CATEX that reflects its seasoned judgment about the precise scope of real property acquisition and disposal that lacks significant individual and cumulative environmental impact. The Postal Service also notes that neither GSA nor USCG received adverse public comments regarding their property disposal CATEXs (see 65 FR 69558; 78 FR 44139).

Although the Postal Service notes minor differences between the phrasing of GSA's and USCG's CATEXs, those differences are not substantive or otherwise of a nature to change the projected environmental consequences of the activities. Because of GSA's preeminent experience with the acquisition and disposal of Federal real property, the Postal Service believes that it is appropriate to amend its own CATEX to match that of the GSA. The Postal Service does not believe that this update to a single CATEX, which follows the model of Federal agencies' existing CATEXs, should be significant or controversial.

The Administrative Procedure Act does not apply to this action (5 U.S.C. 553(a)(2); 39 U.S.C. 410(a)), which is being taken pursuant to the Postal Service's general rulemaking authority under 39 U.S.C. 401(2). Nevertheless, the Postal Service is complying with CEQ Regulations and seeking public input when revising this CATEX. The Postal Service therefore invites comments on the following revision of 39 CFR 775.6(e)(8).

Note that this interim final rule is effective upon its date of publication in the Federal Register. The Postal Service will review any comments received during the 30-day comment period. Following the expiration of the comment period, the Postal Service will publish its responses to any adverse comments in a subsequent Federal Register notice, together with its determination whether the interim final rule will be made permanent without change, or adjusted in response to the comments received.
