[Docket No. USCG–2013–0954]

Special Load Line Exemption for Lake Michigan: Petition for Rulemaking

AGENCY: Coast Guard, DHS.

ACTION: Requests for comments on petitions for rulemaking.

SUMMARY: The Coast Guard announces the availability of several requests for a rulemaking, and requests public comment accordingly. The requesters are petitioning the Coast Guard to establish a special load line-exempted route on Lake Michigan. This exemption would allow non-load line river barges to transit along the eastern shore of Lake Michigan, between Chicago (Calumet Harbor), IL, and Muskegon, MI. This is similar to an existing exempted route along the western shore between Calumet and Milwaukee, WI.

DATES: Comments and related material must either be submitted to our online docket via <http://www.regulations.gov> on or before August 25, 2014, or reach the Docket Management Facility by that date.

Background and Purpose

The requesters are petitioning the Coast Guard to establish a special load line-exempted route along the eastern shore of Lake Michigan, which would allow non-load line river barges to transit between Chicago (Calumet Harbor), IL, and Muskegon, MI. This action pertains to current load line regulations, and the use of non-load line river barges on Lake Michigan (particularly on the Milwaukee and Burns Harbor routes; these are discussed further below).

Load line assignment. Most commercial vessels that are 79 feet in length or longer, and that proceed on domestic or international voyages outside the U.S. Boundary Line (including voyages on the Great Lakes) must be assigned a load line. The purpose of load line assignment is to ensure the overall seaworthiness of the vessel. This is accomplished through the application of several design and construction requirements, such as: Robust hull construction that can withstand severe sea conditions; protection of critical openings (such as hatchways, doors, ventilators, etc.) with weathertight or watertight closures; ensuring that the vessel has adequate stability and strength for all operating conditions; and limiting the loaded draft (by use of load line marks) to ensure that the vessel is not overloaded and has reserve buoyancy.

Furthermore, the vessel must be surveyed annually (by a surveyor from the load line assigning authority) to verify that all of these features are maintained in operable condition, and that no damage or modification has been done to the vessel that compromises its seaworthiness. The benefit in meeting these requirements is that the vessel is considered safe and seaworthy enough for offshore voyages, even under severe weather conditions. This gives the operator maximum flexibility in the commercial employment of the vessel. There are costs associated with load line assignment, however: Higher construction cost for the vessel, and the cost of the annual surveys.

Because river barges are not exposed to any sea conditions, they are not typically constructed to meet the load line standards for coastwise, offshore, or Great Lakes service. Although this makes them less expensive to build and operate, they do not qualify for load line assignment and therefore are not normally permitted to operate outside the Boundary Line.

(More information on load lines and the Boundary Line can be found on the Coast Guard's load line Web site at: <http://www.uscg.mil/hq/cg5/cg5212/loadlines.asp>)

Load line-exempted routes on Lake Michigan. At present, river barges can obtain a special load line that allows them to operate on Lake Michigan between Calumet and Muskegon, provided that they remain within 5 miles of the shoreline, transit only under favorable weather conditions, and only carry dry, non-hazardous cargoes. This load line is issued by the American Bureau of Shipping, who inspects (surveys) the vessel each year to ensure its continued seaworthiness.

Although non-load line river barges are not normally permitted to operate on the Lake, there are two specific routes where they are so permitted under restricted conditions: Between Calumet and Burns Harbor, IL, and between Calumet and Milwaukee, MI. The voyages are subject to weather limitations and certain other loading restrictions. The premise for these exempted routes is that weather conditions on the Lake are often benign, that accurate and timely forecasts are readily available, and that ports of refuge are close at hand along the route. This allows the river barges to avoid bad weather and safely transit along the Lake shore. The specific restrictions for these exempted routes are found in 46 CFR 45.171, et seq.

Petition for a special load line exemption. In order to promote barge transportation of certain agricultural products and cargoes, the petitioners have submitted to the Coast Guard a request to create a load line-exempted route along the eastern shore of Lake Michigan. These requests can be viewed in the docket, but to summarize: The request would effectively extend the existing Burns Harbor exemption up the eastern shore of Lake Michigan to Muskegon, MI. The actual restrictions would be very similar to those for the Milwaukee route.

The benefit of the exemption is that it would allow non-hazardous cargoes to be loaded onto ordinary, non-load line river barges at inland Mississippi River terminals for direct delivery to Muskegon and intermediate Lake ports, and for agricultural products to be similarly transported to downriver terminals.

Request for Comments

In deciding whether or not to move forward with the requested rulemaking, the Coast Guard must consider several issues: The safety of the operation, protection of the marine environment, resource demands on the Coast Guard (particularly compliance verification and enforcement), and the potential economic costs and benefits.

Public comments on these issues, as well as other points that are pertinent to this petition, are encouraged. Upon review, the Coast Guard will decide whether or not to proceed with a rulemaking to establish the proposed exempted route.

This document is issued under authority of 5 U.S.C. 552(a) and 46 U.S.C. 5108.
