SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

I. Background

FDA is announcing the availability of a draft guidance for industry and FDA staff entitled “Human Factors Studies and Related Clinical Study Considerations in Combination Product Design and Development.” This document provides guidance to industry and FDA staff on the underlying principles of HF studies during the development of combination products as defined under 21 CFR part 3. This draft guidance describes Agency recommendations regarding HF information in a combination product investigational or marketing application. It clarifies the different types of HF studies, offers recommendations for timing and sequencing of HF studies, and discusses how HF studies contribute to assuring that combination products are safe and effective for the intended users, uses and environments. The draft guidance also addresses process considerations for HF information in investigational or marketing applications to promote development and timely review of safe and effective combination products. In addition, the draft guidance describes how HF studies relate to other clinical studies.

This draft guidance refers to two existing guidance documents that provide related information on HF considerations. These are Guidance for Industry and FDA Staff, “Applying Human Factors and Usability Engineering to Optimize Medical Device Design,” accessible at <http://www.fda.gov/downloads/MedicalDevices/DeviceRegulationandGuidance/GuidanceDocuments/UCM259760.pdf> and Draft Guidance “Safety Considerations for Product Design to Minimize Medication Errors,” accessible at <http://www.fda.gov/downloads/Drugs/GuidanceComplianceRegulatoryInformation/Guidances/UCM331810.pdf>.

This draft guidance provides examples of the use of HF studies for different types of combination products in different clinical settings. FDA welcomes comments to the docket on other examples of combination products and why they may or may not need HF studies. Additionally FDA seeks comments on what challenges and development risks may arise depending upon whether HF studies are conducted before, in parallel to, or after major clinical studies.

II. Significance of Guidance

This draft guidance is being issued consistent with FDA’s good guidance practices regulation (21 CFR 10.115). The draft guidance, when finalized, will represent the current thinking of FDA on “Human Factors Studies and Related Clinical Study Considerations in Combination Product Design and Development.” It does not establish any rights for any person and is not binding on FDA or the public. You can use an alternative approach if it satisfies the requirements of the applicable statutes and regulations.

III. Electronic Access

Persons with access to the Internet may obtain the document at <http://www.fda.gov/RegulatoryInformation/Guidances/ucm122047.htm>, <http://www.fda.gov/Drugs/GuidanceComplianceRegulatoryInformation/Guidances/default.htm>, or <http://www.regulations.gov>.

This draft guidance refers to currently approved collections of information found in FDA regulations. These collections of information are subject to review by the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) under the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1995 (44 U.S.C. 3501–3520). The collections of information in
