In addition, the PRA also requires Federal agencies to provide a 60-day notice in the Federal Register concerning each proposed collection of information, including each new proposed collection, each proposed extension of existing collection of information, and each reinstatement of previously approved information collection before submitting the collection to OMB for approval. To comply with this requirement, we are publishing this notice of a proposed data collection as described below.

Comments are invited on: (a) Whether the proposed collection of information is necessary for the proper performance of the functions of the agency, including whether the information shall have practical utility; (b) the accuracy of the agency's estimate of the burden of the proposed collection of information; (c) ways to enhance the quality, utility, and clarity of the information to be collected; (d) ways to minimize the burden of the collection of information on respondents, including through the use of automated collection techniques or other forms of information technology; and (e) estimates of capital or start-up costs and costs of operation, maintenance, and purchase of services to provide information. Proposed Project

CDC CUPS, Ferguson Fellowship, and Student Coordinating Center Program Evaluation—Existing Collection in Use Without OMB Control Number—Office of Minority Health and Health Equity

(OMHHE), Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC).

Background and Brief Description

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) works to protect America from health, safety and security threats, both foreign and in the United States. As America continues to evolve into a more diverse society, and as CDC strives to fulfill this mission, it contends with the reality that racial and ethnic minority populations assume a much higher burden of morbidity and mortality than the majority of Americans. Particularly challenging for public health is that as the growth of these underrepresented racial-ethnic groups in the United States population increases, the percentage of underrepresented groups working in public health remains stagnant or continues to decline. Research has shown that physicians of underrepresented populations are more likely to provide services in underserved communities; often providing care at much greater frequency than their white counterparts. Therefore, a major part of achieving CDC's mission is to encourage greater numbers of underrepresented students to pursue a career in public health.

The CDC's Undergraduate Scholars Program (CUPS) and the Dr. James A. Ferguson Emerging Infectious Diseases Fellowship (Ferguson) are educational pipeline programs that seek to increase the pool of qualified, underrepresented professionals in the public health workforce by providing students with experiential knowledge and academic learning. The Student Coordinating Center is the operational support arm of CUPS and Ferguson, providing technical support to the grantees and student follow up efforts. The common mission of CUPS and Ferguson is to encourage students, early in their college and graduate educations, to choose a career in public health (federal, state, local, territorial health agencies or non-governmental agencies), public health research, and to contribute to the public health workforce.

Through a highly competitive selection process, each year a new cohort of up to 150 students is chosen. So far, over 900 participants have been recruited and completed the CUPS program. Each year six to eight students are selected to participate in the Ferguson Program. To date, more than 460 students have participated in the Ferguson Fellowship Program. Racial/Ethnic minorities and other underrepresented students comprise the majority (>90%) of those recruited to both programs. All selected participants receive a full day orientation at CDC, where they are introduced to the Centers' leadership, attend symposia; participate in a series of group discussions; and take part in information exchanges. During the CDC orientation, students are also introduced to CDC's priorities, current public health initiatives, and emerging public health issues at the federal level.

After the initial CDC orientation, students are assigned to a variety of public health practice and research settings across the nation, where they are paired with public health mentors who provide the interns a guided experience of public health through instruction that emphasizes skill areas identified as Core Competencies for public health professionals. In addition to mentorship and didactic learning, students also receive real world work experience that provides foundational knowledge for a career in public health.

There are nine data collection instruments administered by the four grantees: Summer Public Health Scholars Program; James A. Ferguson Program; Maternal and Child Health Careers/Research Initiatives for Student Enhancement; Public Health Leadership and Learning Undergraduate Student Success (PLUSS); Project Imhotep; SCC Follow-up Survey (6 months); SCC Follow-up Survey (12 months); SCC Follow-up Survey (24 months); Future Public Health Leaders Program.

The maximum estimated, annualized time burden is 6,081 hours. There is no cost to respondents other than their time.

Proposed Project

Data Management for Executive and Scientific Resources Access Management Tracking System—New—Executive and Scientific Resource Office (ESRO), Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC).

Background and Brief Description

ESRO seeks to submit and information collection request for approval of information collections through its ESRO Access Management Tracking System (EAMTS). This system will automate current manual processes for programs managed by ESRO. This new process will provide users a single, integrated location to allow for collaboration, faster processing between the programs and ESRO and a better onboarding experience for potential fellows.

EAMTS will support users by providing a single, integrated location for enterprise content management, manage documents and records by using workflows an information rights management. This business process will allow ESRO to design forms that are accessible in SharePoint through a Web Browser. Team members will be able to access critical business information, analyze and view data, and publish reports to make more informed decisions.

EAMTS will allow CIO's to submit digital packets including Guest Researcher, ORISE, Title 42 Fellowship Visa request (portion of CDC 0.1475)
and Appointment Mechanism Determination Request Form (CDC 0.4601). CIO's can upload supplemental documentation as an attachment to each application, electronically track and monitor status of application, digitally sign forms and requests, receive case determinations quickly and accurately, and track the Visa status of Title 42 Fellowship requests that require Visa assistance from the Human Resources Office.

EAMTS is developed in SharePoint for CDC's Centers/Institutes/Offices (CIO) to submit required information for all of Executive and Scientific Resource Office's managed programs and for these CIO's to effectively and efficiently digitally review this information. Data is managed and maintained by appropriate CIO Staff with ground and form level permission.

Permissions to EAMTS are required to access the lists, forms, and document library. This includes entering data,
