

configuration with a maximum of 32 traps and 2 surface buoys per trawl. Spiny lobster trap modifications to be tested by the applicant would include funnel and escape gap dimensions and locations, in addition to bait types. Some traps may be outfitted with lionfish optical recognition technology. Modified traps would be compared to standard wire spiny lobster trap controls. As described in the application, the sampling area would increase from Alligator and Looe Key in the Florida Keys of the South Atlantic to all Federal waters of the South Atlantic off Monroe County, Florida and portions of the Gulf. In the Gulf, sampling with traps would occur in depths from 150–300 feet (46–91 meters) southwest of a line defined by 25°21' N lat., 84°00' W long. at the northwest corner and by 24°28' N lat., 83°00' W long., at the southeast corner. The amended EFP would increase sampling from two times per month in the South Atlantic to two to four times per month in the South Atlantic and Gulf. Only areas open to commercial lobster fishing will be included in the study area and fishing would occur throughout the calendar year, including during the spiny lobster closed season. The amended EFP would increase the number of traps allowed in the water at any one time from 100 to 300 (200 and 100 in the South Atlantic and Gulf regions, respectively). The amended EFP would increase the maximum trap soak period from 21 to 28 days per deployment. The amended EFP would also increase the maximum number of sampling trips from 40 to 160 trips per year. Bait to be used in the traps could include live lionfish, plastic decoy lionfish, artificial lures, fish oil, and fish heads. As practicable, video and still photos of trap deployment and animal behavior in and near traps would be recorded using cameras.

FWC would contract commercial trap fishermen with experience fishing within the study area. The amended EFP would no longer require research traps to have a current stamp, endorsement, or certificate, but FWC would mark each research trap. Additionally, the contractors must have demonstrable experience in the catch and handling of lionfish. The applicant expects the activities to be conducted from up to eight federally permitted commercial fishing vessels. At least one FWC scientist would be on board a vessel at all times, i.e., on both deployment trips and retrieval trips. Data to be collected per trip would include: gear configuration and fishing effort data (e.g., date and time of deployment and retrieval, latitude, longitude, and water depth of each deployed trawl, bait type used); soak time for each trawl; trap loss and movement from original set position; protected species interactions; bycatch species (amount, length, and disposition); and lionfish catch data for each trap type. Some species would be returned to the water as soon as possible; other species would be retained for species identification verification and scientific research. All lionfish would be retained and either used for research, sold, or destroyed. NMFS notes that the original EFP allowed contracted fishermen to sell any legally harvested species. FWC has now requested that NMFS remove this provision from the EFP and allow fishermen to retain and sell only lionfish. FWC would be allowed to retain representative sub-samples of any fish species for species identification verification and research in the laboratory.

The applicant has requested to amend its current EFP as described, but to retain the original EFP's effective period of 3 years from the date of original issuance of the permit by NMFS on November 13, 2018.

NMFS finds the application warrants further consideration based on a preliminary review. Possible conditions the agency may impose on the permit, if granted, include but are not limited to, a prohibition on conducting activities within marine protected areas, marine sanctuaries, special management zones, or areas where they might interfere with managed fisheries without additional authorization. Additionally, NMFS may require special protections for ESA-listed species and designated critical habitat, and may require particular gear markings. A final decision on issuance of the amended EFP will depend on NMFS' review of public comments received on the application, consultations with the appropriate fishery management agencies of the affected states, Councils, and the U.S. Coast Guard, and a determination that the activities to be taken under the EFP are consistent with all applicable laws and regulations.
