History and Description of the Remains

At an unknown date before 1960, human remains representing, at minimum, one individual were removed from the Thurston site, Stockbridge, Madison County, NY, by Herbert Bigford, Sr. In 1959, the Longyear Museum of Anthropology purchased the artifact collection of Mr. Bigford from his widow. The human remains consist of a phalanx. It is more likely than not that the phalanx is of a Native American. These human remains were removed from "Burial 14?," as recorded in Mr. Bigford's catalogue. No known individual was identified. No associated funerary objects are present.

At an unknown date before 1981, human remains representing, at minimum, two individuals were removed from the Thurston site, Stockbridge, Madison County, NY, by Theodore Whitney. In 1980, Mr. Whitney donated his collection to the Longyear Museum of Anthropology. The human remains of individual 1 consist of one clavicle and one scapula. The human remains of individual 2 consist of two cranial fragments. One cranial fragment is possibly a piece of an occipital, and the other cranial fragment is possibly a piece of a temporal or an occipital. No known individuals were identified. No associated funerary objects are present.

The Thurston site dates to A.D. 1625–1640 based on recovered European artifacts, such as glass beads, a snuff box dated 1634, kaolin smoking pipes, and Jesuit rings. These objects were recovered by members of the Chenango Chapter of the New York State Archaeological Association. The Thurston site is located in the aboriginal territory of the Oneida Iroquois (Haudenosaunee), and the dates of occupation correspond to a time when the Oneida Iroquois are known, from historical sources and oral history, to have occupied the region.

At an unknown date before 1966, human remains representing, at minimum, one individual were removed from Site #49, near the southwest shore of Poolville Lake (aka Poolville Pond), Poolville, Madison County, NY, by Walter ("Bud") Bennett. In 1965, the estate of Mr. Bennett donated his collection to the Longyear Museum of Anthropology. The human remains consist of one cranial fragment. The cranial fragment is possibly a piece of a temporal or an occipital. No known individual was identified. No associated funerary objects are present.

The age of Site #49 dates to ca. 5000 years ago and was occupied intermittently until colonial times based on recovered archeological materials, such as dated projectile points and European artifacts. These objects were recovered by members of the Chenango Chapter of the New York State Archaeological Association. Site #49 site is located in the aboriginal territory of the Oneida Iroquois (Haudenosaunee), and the dates of occupation correspond to a time when the Oneida Iroquois are known, from historical sources and oral history, to have occupied the region.

At an unknown date prior to 2001, human remains representing, at minimum, two individuals were removed from one or more unknown sites likely located in Madison County, NY, by Gordon Ginther. In 2000, Mr. Ginther donated his collection to the Longyear Museum of Anthropology. The human remains of individual 1 consist of three tibia fragments. The human remains of individual 2 consist of a cranial fragment. No known individuals were identified. No associated funerary objects are present.

Mr. Ginther was an avocational archeologist who excavated several Oneida sites in Madison County, NY, during the 1980s and in 1990. The known sites represented in the Ginther Collection at the Longyear Museum of Anthropology are all Oneida sites. They include Bach (ca. 1550), Diable (ca. 1570), Dungey (ca. 1650), Marshall (ca. 1630), Primes Hill (ca. 1696), Stone Quarry (ca. 1640), Thurston (ca. 1625), and Vaillancourt (ca. 1525). Thus, all of the human remains removed by Mr. Ginther likely derive from one or more Oneida sites in Madison County, NY.

Madison County is located in the aboriginal territory of the Oneida Iroquois (Haudenosaunee), and the period of occupation of the sites that Mr. Ginther excavated correspond to a time when the Oneida Iroquois are known, from historical sources and oral history, to have occupied the region.

Determinations Made by the Longyear Museum of Anthropology

Officials of the Longyear Museum of Anthropology have determined that:

- Pursuant to 25 U.S.C. 3001(2), there is a relationship of shared group identity that can be reasonably traced between the Native American human remains and the Oneida Indian Nation (previously listed as Oneida Nation of New York).

History and Description of the Cultural Item(s)

Between 1920-1953, five cultural items were removed from Wrangell, AK, by Mr. Walter C. Waters. In 1953, the items were sold to the Burke Museum by his widow. The five sacred objects/objects of cultural patrimony are Keet S'aaxw, Killerwhale hat (catalog number 1-1436), a Aankáawu Wóodzaga, Rich Man's Cane, also known as Keet Wóodzaka, Killerwhale Cane (catalog number 1-1443), Sáax, L'axkeit, Marmot Mask (catalog number 1-1442), Xoots Shakee.át, Bear Headdress (catalog number 1-1447) and Xoots Koodás', Bear Shirt (catalog number 1-1493).

At an unknown date, one cultural item was removed from Wrangell, AK. The item, a Gunakadeit s'eik daakeit, Sea Monster Pipe (catalog number 2.5E561), was acquired by Leonard M. Lasser of Windsor, CT, who donated the pipe to the Burke Museum in 1972.

Sometime between 1926-1937, one cultural item was collected by Axel Rasmussen in Wrangell AK. In 1948, the Portland Art Museum purchased Axel Rasmussen's collection, including the Xoots L'axkeit, Grizzly Bear Mask (catalog number 2.5E604). They later deaccessioned the piece, and it was acquired by Bill Holm, who then donated it to the Burke Museum in 1974.

These seven objects all originate from Wrangell AK. This area is the home of Naanya.áayí Clan of the Tlingit people of Southeastern Alaska. Several of these objects are visible in historic photographs including a photograph of Chief Shakes V (Kaawishté) laying in state ca. 1878, and a photograph of Chief Shakes VI (Gush Tlein) along with the possessions of the Naanya.áayí clan inside X'atgoo Hít (Mudshark House) around 1900. Information provided by the Tribes indicates that the Naa Shaadeihani, (head man) or Hit s'aasti (House Leader) were caretakers of these objects, but the objects were communally owned by the clan. These leaders and their relatives were not allowed to make independent decisions to dispose of or alienate clan property. Additionally, these objects are an integral part of ceremonial practices of the Tlingit people and are used during ceremonial activities to represent and unify clan members. Today the Naanya.áayí clan is represented by the Wrangell Cooperative Association and the Central Council of the Tlingit & Haida Indian Tribes.

Determinations Made by the Burke Museum

Officials of the Burke Museum have determined that:

- Pursuant to 25 U.S.C. 3001(3)(C), the seven cultural items described above are specific ceremonial objects needed by traditional Native American religious leaders for the practice of traditional Native American religions by their present-day adherents.
- Pursuant to 25 U.S.C. 3001(3)(D), the seven cultural items described above have ongoing historical, traditional, or cultural importance central to the Native American group or culture itself, rather than property owned by an individual.
- Pursuant to 25 U.S.C. 3001(2), there is a relationship of shared group identity that can be reasonably traced between the sacred objects, and objects of cultural patrimony and the Central Council of the Tlingit & Haida Indian Tribes and the Wrangell Cooperative Association.

Additional Requestors and Disposition

Lineal descendants or representatives of any Indian Tribe or Native Hawaiian organization not identified in this notice that wish to claim these cultural items should submit a written request with information in support of the claim to Sven Haakanson, Curator of Native American Anthropology, Burke Museum, University of Washington, Box 353010, Seattle, WA 98195, telephone (206) 543-3210, email svenh@uw.edu, by May 20, 2020. After that date, if no additional claimants have come forward, transfer of control of the sacred objects and objects of cultural patrimony to the Central Council of the Tlingit & Haida Indian Tribes and the Wrangell Cooperative Association may proceed.

The Burke Museum is responsible for notifying Central Council of the Tlingit & Haida Indian Tribes and the Wrangell Cooperative Association that this notice has been published.
