History and Description of the Cultural Item

In the 1920s, one cultural item was removed from an unknown location most likely on the southeastern coast of Alaska. In the 1920s, anthropologist Erna Gunther collected or bought a wooden food box from the Tsimshian people. After her death in 1982, Gunther's son, anthropologist Robert Spier, inherited the box. Spier reported that his mother did not tell him much about the box, as it caused tension between his parents and ultimately played a part in their divorce. Robert Spier died in 2014. In 2017, his widow, Carolyn Spier, donated the box to the McClure Archives and University Museum, along with many other items in her husband's personal anthropological collection. The one object of cultural patrimony is this wooden food box.

Following analysis by McClure Archive and University Museum staff, a determination was made that this wooden food box is Tsimshian, and is connected to the Metlakatla Indian Community, Annette Island Reserve, in Alaska.

Determinations Made by the McClure Archives and University Museum, University of Central Missouri

Officials of the McClure Archives and University Museum, University of Central Missouri have determined that:

- Pursuant to 25 U.S.C. 3001(3)(D), the one cultural item described above has ongoing historical, traditional, or cultural importance central to the Native American group or culture itself, rather than property owned by an individual.
- Pursuant to 25 U.S.C. 3001(2), there is a relationship of shared group identity that can be reasonably traced between the object of cultural patrimony and the Metlakatla Indian Community, Annette Island Reserve.
