SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: The Hult Reservoir is located within the Lake Creek watershed, near the community of Horton, Oregon, within the BLM Siuslaw Field Office of the Northwest Oregon District.

Hult Reservoir is a 41-acre pond, approximately a half-mile long and less than a quarter-mile wide. Hult Dam is an earthen dam consisting of loose rock placed on the downstream face and is one of nine high-hazard-rated dams managed by the BLM due to the proximity of downstream residents and the potential for loss of life.

The dam and spillway at Hult Reservoir were originally constructed in 1949 or 1950 by the Hult Timber Company to create a holding pond for logs. These lands were transferred to the BLM in 1994. The site is now primarily used for recreation.

During severe winter weather, the amount of rainfall in the catchment area contributes substantially to the water levels in the reservoir. The dam requires constant monitoring and adjustment of the outflow valve by BLM engineers to avoid overwhelming the current water level controls in place. Since the transfer of ownership, costly renovations (e.g., grouting, reinforcement structures, and monitoring devices) to the dam have been ongoing to address existing and imminent structural and safety concerns.

In 2017, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers (USACE) conducted an inspection of the dam, which identified several potential failure modes that would cause an uncontrolled release of impounded water downstream, and the projected inundation area would impact 70 to 130 people in the community of Horton, as well as Oregon State Highway 36. An uncontrolled release could result in loss of life and damage to infrastructure critical for access to the area by emergency services. The primary potential failure mode identified during this inspection was overtopping and breach during a large flood event. A secondary potential failure mode was instability of the spillway dike near the spillway. This area is marginally stable and is built on a foundation of ancient landslide material. Prolonged rainfall and elevated flows may cause an increase in groundwater, leading to the failure of the structure.

As a result of this 2017 inspection and its associated 2018 report, the BLM requested that USACE provide the BLM with various options that would reduce the risks found in the inspection. In response, USACE did preliminary feasibility analysis on four options: (1) Raise the dam crest height to decrease the probability of overtopping during a storm event; (2) Remove the failing spillway dike and use the excavated material to widen the dam; (3) Remove the dam; and (4) Lower the dam crest height to reduce pond storage and lower the potential for loss of human life and
