GOVERNMENT PUBLISHING OFFICE

Request for Feedback To Assist the Task Force on a Digital Federal Depository Library Program

AGENCY: U.S. Government Publishing Office.

ACTION: Notice and request for feedback.

SUMMARY: The U.S. Government Publishing Office (GPO) is seeking comments and input from interested parties to assist the Task Force on a Digital Federal Depository Library Program (FDLP). To contribute to the continued evolution of the FDLP, in FY 2021, in response to a recommendation of the Depository Library Council (DLC), GPO Director Hugh N. Halpern established a Task Force to study the feasibility of an all-digital FDLP. The 23-member Task Force has representation from the DLC, Federal depository libraries (FDLs) of different types and sizes, library association representatives, Federal agencies, and GPO. The Task Force has been working throughout 2022–10 investigate whether an all-digital FDLP is possible, and if so, to define the scope of an all-digital depository program and make recommendations as to how to implement and operate such a program. The Task Force's purview included an examination of the current landscape in FDLs, of FDLP-related operations at the GPO, and of the dissemination of publications by Federal agencies. The draft report of the Task Force is now available for public comment at <https://www.fdlp.gov/>.

DATES: Comments must be received by October 14, 2022.

ADDRESSES: You may submit comments via the comment form available at <https://www.fdlp.gov/>.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Kristene Blake, (202) 262–3397, or FDLPtaskforce@gpo.gov.

Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality

Challenge Competition: Announcement of AHRQ Challenge on Integrating Healthcare System Data With Systematic Review Findings

AGENCY: Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality (AHRQ), HHS.

ACTION: Notice.

SUMMARY: The Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality (AHRQ) is announcing a challenge competition to explore the resources and infrastructure needed to integrate real-world data from healthcare systems into systematic review findings. This healthcare systems data can augment study findings synthesized in systematic reviews in a number of ways, including by filling evidence gaps identified in the systematic review to strengthen the available evidence, and by examining the applicability of systematic review findings to real-world populations, including population subgroups not examined in published studies. Ultimately, this work will help AHRQ understand if and how sources of data and information outside of traditional systematic reviews, particularly from healthcare systems themselves, could be used alongside systematic reviews to improve healthcare decision making, healthcare delivery and potentially patient outcomes. This challenge competition will start on (September 26, 2022) and will be completed in two phases, with cash prizes awarded at the end of Phase 2 to all of those proceeding to Phase 2 and to the winners of Phase 2. The winner and runner-up from Phase 2 will be posted on the AHRQ website.

DATES: Phase 1 Submission Deadline on January 9, 2023 and Phase 2 Submission Deadline on July 10, 2023.

ADDRESSES: Submit your responses electronically via: <https://www.challenge.gov/?challenge=ahrq-challenge-on-integrating-healthcare-system-data-with-systematic-review-findings>.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

Problem Statement

The Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality (AHRQ), U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS), is announcing a challenge competition to explore the feasibility, resources and infrastructure needed to integrate real world data from healthcare systems into systematic review findings. The statutory authority for this challenge competition is Section 105 of the America COMPETES Reauthorization Act of 2010.

AHRQ's Evidence-based Practice Center (EPC) Program produces systematic reviews which synthesize information from the peer reviewed literature and provide the state of the science on available healthcare technologies (such as pharmaceuticals and medical devices) as well as healthcare delivery strategies. The process of creating these reviews is stakeholder driven, methodologically rigorous, and transparent. Reviews are used to inform healthcare decisions, including recommendations in clinical practice guidelines as well as national coverage determinations by Medicare. AHRQ also supports healthcare systems in their efforts to improve the quality of care and optimize patient outcomes; systematic reviews are scoped to address issues of priority to healthcare systems. Yet, due to limitations in the literature base, EPC systematic reviews may be inconclusive or only represent a narrow patient population, making it difficult to generalize or implement the findings within heterogeneous healthcare systems.

Systematic reviews may also lack contextual details that can inform successful implementation. Improving healthcare delivery (and thus patient outcomes) often entails addressing issues beyond the benefits or harms of an intervention, traditionally the objective of a systematic review. Traditional reviews may not explain gaps in uptake or use of a clinical service and questions about how best to implement a given clinical service (e.g., details around implementation of a service or intervention).

A recent EPC Program methods report (<https://effectivehealthcare.ahrq.gov/products/unpublished-health-data/methods-report>) articulates specific scenarios with examples of where healthcare system data may most effectively complement systematic reviews (i.e., to improve the strength, applicability, and implementation of evidence). In one example, investigators at the Mayo Clinic found that published evidence on outcomes following total pancreatectomy was sparse, so they supplemented a meta-analysis of published studies with their own unpublished healthcare system data, which more than doubled the sample size and improved the strength of evidence available (<https://pubmed.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/20681992/>).

In another instance, secondary analyses of Veterans Affairs (VA) data (<https://pubmed.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/35810550/>) confirmed the applicability to the VA of findings from a published systematic review (<https://www.hsrd.research.va.gov/publications/esp/robot-gen-surg.cfm>).

The recent EPC methods report also outlines important limitations and considerations when using unpublished healthcare system data alongside systematic reviews, such as relevant limitations in data quality. However, the report did not address the necessary resources, skills, partnerships, and processes required to utilize healthcare system data alongside systematic reviews to strengthen the actionability of systematic reviews.

This Challenge therefore invites applicants to conduct an analyses of healthcare system data to supplement an existing AHRQ EPC Program systematic review. This will help AHRQ understand if and how sources of data
