Needs and Uses: The Defense Logistics Agency is an organization with a public-facing website used to inform and work with its customers in the military services; federal, state, and local governments; industry and small business; and the general public. Measurement and feedback through surveying is needed to better meet the needs of the agency’s audiences and provide both overall goals for improvement and to address specific issues presented by website visitors. DLA Public Affairs uses the feedback to address immediate concerns and set both short and long-term goals for improving the agency’s website. Actionable survey comments are addressed with DLA offices who manage the corresponding website content for quick, specific, and direct content improvements. Short-term actions include fixing broken links, adding or updating page content, restructuring, or altering page layouts to make content easier to browse, and creating new resources to meet previously unknown customer needs. Combined data and trends inform DLA Public Affairs strategy for larger-scale website improvement projects and are summarized for DLA senior leader awareness and long-term planning. Larger efforts include changes to sitewide navigation, homepage redesigns, and aggregating previously dispersed similar sitewide resources to central, prominent places.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

Title; Associated Form; and OMB Number: Generic Clearance for U.S. Naval Research Laboratory Cognitive Geospatial Systems Research; OMB Control Number 0703-NRLG.

Needs and Uses: The Cognitive Geospatial Systems Section of the U.S. Naval Research Laboratory (NRL) is funded to conduct geospatial human-machine teams research. As part of the research, it is crucial that human subjects be surveyed in order to understand perception, cognition, and behavior as it pertains to digital maps, visual geospatial analytics, and spatialized audio. The research will be used to create and improve general-purpose digital map products, geospatial analytics, and workflows for situational awareness associated with the geospatial analysts. The subject matter of stimuli will relate to map features (including label styles, label placement, fonts, icons and symbols, color, saturation, opacity, size, scaling, clutter or density), base map features (including orthogonal photographic imagery and terrain), and audio features (including spectrograms of audio, sound quality, and audio generated from environmental scenarios with multiple sound sources). Research tasks will relate to the identification of landmarks, finding points of interest, route planning, distance and elevation estimation, use of a legend, providing preference judgements, identification of audio sources, and localization of audio sources. All surveys within this research program will consist of anonymous (i.e., no collection of Personally Identifiable Information (PII) as defined by the Office of Management and Budget) questionnaires lasting no longer than an estimate of 60 minutes. For prudent comparative science and replication, respondents will be asked to provide demographic information such as age, gender, native language, ethnicity, color blindness, known hearing loss, frequency/ability of casual map use. Preferences for and performance with the stimuli (geographic map, geospatial analytic, or audio) will be collected and evaluated via open-ended questions, close-ended questions, multiple-choice questions, rating scales, mouse-click counts, mouse-click positions, and eye behavior captured by eye tracking hardware. Results will provide insight into participant's task performance, perception, attention, and cognitive load when exposed to or interacting with the research stimuli. Each survey will only be conducted after full approval of the
