

a safety concern that was intended to be addressed by handrail requirements.

Ricon says that, like the noncompliance found in the Braun Corporation's petition, "there is little to no risk of harm or injury" caused by the subject noncompliances. Ricon then reiterates that it is unlikely an operator would simultaneously activate the buttons that control the lift functions and if simultaneous activation of the "STOW"/"DEPLOY" buttons or the "UP"/"DOWN," did occur, the lift does not respond in a way that would compromise the safety of the occupant. Likewise, Ricon claims, the noncompliant slope of the outer barrier "is not sufficiently different" from the required slope ratio that it would cause "a noticeable change to the user."

Last, Ricon states that "[i]t is not aware of any claims or injury involving the performance of the control pendant, outer barrier slope, or operator manual or label wording."

In its petition, Navistar explains that due to the FMVSS No. 403 noncompliances found in the subject lifts, the subject school and commercial buses manufactured by Navistar are noncompliant with paragraph S4.1.4 of FMVSS No. 404. Navistar says that the subject buses meet all other requirements found in FMVSS No. 404.

Navistar states that it "incorporates and adopts the information from Ricon's Petition" and also says it has not received any complaints or other notices nor is it aware of any accidents, injuries, or warranty claims related to the noncompliances occurring in the subject lifts.

Ricon and Navistar conclude their petitions by stating that the subject noncompliances are inconsequential as they relate to motor vehicle safety and that their petitions to be exempted from providing notification of the noncompliance, as required by 49 U.S.C. 30118, and a remedy for the noncompliance, as required by 49 U.S.C. 30120, should be granted.

NHTSA notes that the statutory provisions (49 U.S.C. 30118(d) and 30120(h)) that permit manufacturers to file petitions for a determination of inconsequentiality allow NHTSA to exempt manufacturers only from the duties found in sections 30118 and 30120, respectively, to notify owners, purchasers, and dealers of a defect or noncompliance and to remedy the defect or noncompliance. Therefore, any decision on these petitions only applies to the subject equipment and vehicles that the petitioners no longer controlled at the time they determined that the noncompliance existed. However, any decision on these petitions does not relieve equipment and vehicle distributors and dealers of the prohibitions on the sale, offer for sale, or introduction or delivery for introduction into interstate commerce of the noncompliant equipment and vehicles under their control after Ricon and Navistar notified them that the subject noncompliance existed.
