DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

Drug Enforcement Administration

[Docket No. DEA-1086]

Special Surveillance List of Chemicals, Products, Materials and Equipment Used in the Manufacture of Controlled Substances and Listed Chemicals

AGENCY: Drug Enforcement Administration, Department of Justice.

ACTION: Notice.

SUMMARY: The Controlled Substances Act provides for civil penalties for the distribution of a laboratory supply to a person who uses, or attempts to use, that laboratory supply to manufacture a controlled substance or a listed chemical, if that distribution was made with reckless disregard for the illegal uses to which such laboratory supply will be put. The term laboratory supply is defined as a listed chemical or any chemical, substance, or item on a special surveillance list published by the Attorney General which contains chemicals, products, materials, or equipment used in the manufacture of controlled substances and listed chemicals. The Drug Enforcement Administration is hereby publishing a final notice to update the Special Surveillance List.

DATES: This Special Surveillance List is effective October 24, 2023.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Terrence L. Boos, Drug and Chemical Evaluation Section, Diversion Control Division, Drug Enforcement Administration; Telephone: (571) 362-3249.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: The Controlled Substances Act (CSA), as amended by the Comprehensive Methamphetamine Control Act of 1996 (MCA), provides for the publication of a Special Surveillance List by the Attorney General.¹ The Special Surveillance List identifies laboratory supplies which are used in the manufacture of controlled substances and listed chemicals. The CSA defines “laboratory supply” as “a listed chemical or any chemical, substance, or item on a special surveillance list published by the Attorney General which contains chemicals, products, materials, or equipment used in the manufacture of controlled substances and listed chemicals.”² The CSA provides for a civil penalty of not more than $250,000 for the distribution of a laboratory supply to a person who uses, or attempts to use, that laboratory supply to manufacture a controlled substance or a listed chemical, if that distribution was made with “reckless disregard” for the illegal uses to which such a laboratory supply will be put.³ The CSA further states that, for purposes of 21 U.S.C. 842(a)(11), “there is a rebuttable presumption of reckless disregard at trial if the Attorney General notifies a firm in writing that a laboratory supply sold by the firm, or any other person or firm, has been used by a customer of the notified firm, or distributed further by that customer, for the unlawful production of controlled substances or listed chemicals a firm distributes and 2 weeks or more after the notification the notified firm distributes a laboratory supply to the customer.”⁴

The publication of the Special Surveillance List serves two purposes. First, it informs individuals and firms of the potential use of the items on the list in the manufacture of controlled substances and listed chemicals. Second, it reminds individuals and firms that civil penalties may be imposed on them if they distribute a laboratory supply to a person who uses, or attempts to use, that laboratory supply to manufacture a controlled substance or a listed chemical, in violation of the CSA, with reckless disregard for the illegal uses to which such a laboratory supply will be put.⁵ The publication of the updated Special Surveillance List provides an increased level of public awareness and law enforcement control to prevent the diversion of laboratory supplies used for the manufacture of listed chemicals and controlled substances.

The first Special Surveillance List was published in 1999 and has not been updated since.⁶ Although the CSA does not require notice and comment for changes to the Special Surveillance List, DEA provided notice of proposed changes and an opportunity for the public to comment because the list has not been updated in over 23 years.⁷

Comments Received

DEA received 29 comments in response to the notice of proposed updates to the Special Surveillance List, all of which were in opposition to the proposed changes. According to the commenters, the update to the Special Surveillance List will further regulate the chemical industry, which would impose additional regulatory burdens on small businesses. Several commenters also objected to the addition of three chemicals to the Special Surveillance List: sodium borohydride, propiophenone, and propionyl chloride.

DEA Response: As explained in the notice of proposed updates to the Special Surveillance List, the updates do not impose any new regulatory burden on the public, and they do not impose any recordkeeping or reporting requirements for any of the laboratory supplies. The chemicals that are being added to the Special Surveillance List are not themselves being regulated as listed chemicals or controlled substances under the CSA. The Special Surveillance List is being updated to reflect changes in the chemicals, products, materials, or equipment used in the manufacture of controlled substances and listed chemicals, to include additional laboratory supplies that are used in the illicit manufacture of controlled substances and listed chemicals.

Several commenters objected to the addition of three chemicals to the Special Surveillance List: sodium borohydride, propiophenone, and propionyl chloride. These objections were devoid of acknowledgement that
