SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

I. Background

Strengthening our supply chains is a critical component of the Biden-Harris Administration’s efforts to advance our worker-centered trade policy, create sustainable economic growth, ensure that our economy is more resilient in the face of supply shocks, and enhance U.S. economic security. From the COVID-19 pandemic to Russia’s full-scale invasion of Ukraine, Americans have felt first-hand the impacts of supply chain disruptions, which include volatile prices for critical consumer goods and medical products and widespread product shortages that contribute to inflationary dynamics. Further, global supply chains have been designed to maximize short-term efficiency and minimize costs, leading to greater vulnerability and unsustainable dependencies, and furthermore have promoted trade that may not reflect our core values, like labor standards and environmental protection.

This is why the Administration is undertaking a whole-of-government effort to proactively strengthen domestic manufacturing and to secure trusted supply chains through strategic arrangements with trusted partners (friend-shoring) and with regional partners (near-shoring). The President is using all the tools at his disposal, including new authorities under the CHIPS and Science Act, Inflation Reduction Act, and Bipartisan Infrastructure Law, to incentivize the re-shoring and domestic expansion of critical supply chains. Enduring resilience will require new investments in infrastructure, new incentives to increase the supply of key inputs, and new forms of cooperation with allies and trading partners to prevent and withstand supply chain disruptions and mitigate risks of price spikes and volatility that could contribute to inflationary dynamics.

To advance these policy priorities on behalf of the American people, USTR has been crafting a new approach to trade and investment policy that promotes supply chain resilience. Resilient supply chains provide a range of sources for critical inputs; adapt, rebound, and recover with agility when faced with economic shocks; uphold labor rights and environmental protections; and strengthen the domestic manufacturing base and workforce that drive economic growth and world-class American innovation.

Over the last several decades, however, U.S. trade and investment policy—including rules related to supply chains—were designed to incentivize short-term cost-efficiency and drive tariff liberalization, with the goal of creating an unfettered global marketplace. This approach helped shape producers’ decision-making that, in many cases, fostered geographically concentrated and operationally complex supply chains. For instance, natural disasters overseas in 2011 disrupted “just-in-time” supply chains with significant negative impacts for U.S. automakers. In geopolitically fraught regions, the challenges are frequently even greater; when low cost is the driver of sourcing decisions, and absent
