This notice invites comment on a proposed information collection project titled REACH: Rural Re-Engagement and Care using Community Health Workers (CHWs) for Persons with HIV. This project is designed to collect standardized program evaluation data from health departments and HIV clinic partners who receive Federal funds for these activities.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: Under the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1995 (PRA) (44 U.S.C. 3501–3520), Federal agencies must obtain approval from the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) for each collection of information they conduct or sponsor. In addition, the PRA also requires Federal agencies to provide a 60-day notice in the Federal Register concerning each proposed collection of information, including each new proposed collection, each proposed extension of existing collection of information, and each reinstatement of previously approved information collection before submitting the collection to the OMB for approval. To comply with this requirement, we are publishing this notice of a proposed data collection as described below.

The OMB is particularly interested in comments that will help:

1. Evaluate whether the proposed collection of information is necessary for the proper performance of the functions of the agency, including whether the information will have practical utility;

2. Evaluate the accuracy of the agency's estimate of the burden of the proposed collection of information, including the validity of the methodology and assumptions used;

3. Enhance the quality, utility, and clarity of the information to be collected;

4. Minimize the burden of the collection of information on those who are to respond, including through the use of appropriate automated, electronic, mechanical, or other technological collection techniques or other forms of information technology, e.g., permitting electronic submissions of responses; and

5. Assess information collection costs.

Proposed Project

REACH: Rural Re-Engagement and Care using CHWs for Persons with HIV—New—National Center for HIV, Viral Hepatitis, STD, and TB Prevention (NCHHSTP), Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC).

Background and Brief Description

In rural communities, people with HIV (PWH) may face challenges in accessing consistent HIV care services. In these communities, PWH may also experience health care provider shortages and have fewer providers with expertise in treating HIV. Transportation challenges, where some patients have to travel long distances for care, may also exist. Previous studies have shown community-based or home-based delivery of care is an effective approach to re-engage PWH back into HIV clinical care. This strategy was studied primarily internationally with results showing that community-based delivery of anti-retroviral treatment (ART) significantly increased viral suppression. However, in the US, this model, which may include home visits, has not been implemented as part of routine treatment and care services. Community health workers (CHWs) are frontline public health workers who are trusted members of the community and have a uniquely close understanding of the community served. This trusting relationship enables the CHW to serve as a liaison between health/social services and the community. A CHW approach was assessed as part of the EHE pilot jumpstart initiative which found that CHWs were successful in East Baton Rouge, LA, by facilitating access to HIV treatment for priority populations. Additionally, the use of CHWs has been successful and cost-effective for certain chronic health conditions, particularly when working with low-income persons; people who are medically underserved, and racial/ethnic minority communities to promote disease management in these populations. This demonstration project will provide quantitative and qualitative data on the effectiveness and implementation of a CHW home-based approach to facilitate re-engagement in care and outreach to PWH. The approach aims to improve retention in care and sustained viral load suppression among PWH living in rural communities, to benefit both individual health and reduce community-level HIV transmission. In this demonstration project, recipients are funded to collaborate with HIV care providers to identify PWH in rural communities not in care or not virally suppressed and to implement a CHW-mediated model of re-engagement to care and outreach services for PWH in rural communities. CHWs facilitate re-engagement of PWH who are not in care and outreach to those who are not virally suppressed to provide services that may include ART delivery, sample collection for standard HIV laboratory testing, transfer of self-collected specimens, as well as provide transportation services, arranging and scheduling telehealth visits and/or in person visits with an HIV medical provider and other providers (mental health, primary care) and offer evidence-based medication adherence support.

This collection of deidentified data will allow CDC to assist health departments and their partner HIV clinics in monitoring and evaluating their programs and to identify best practices for provision of implementation of CHW-mediated services for re-engagement to care and outreach for PWH in rural communities. Longitudinal person-level data collection will occur through the clinic's electronic health record (EHR) and a database shared between clinic and the health department, and additional program evaluation data will be collected through client surveys. CDC requests approval for 295 annual burden hours for the recipients to collect, enter or upload, and report client demographic and behavioral characteristics, client data from the EHR, and client and provider surveys. There are no other costs to respondents other than their time.

Proposed Project

Evaluation of HIV Self-Testing and Clinical Testing Guidelines Implementation—New—National Centers for HIV, Viral Hepatitis, STD, and TB Prevention (NCHHSTP), Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC).

Background and Brief Description

It takes several years and a significant number of staff and resources to develop and disseminate guidelines. The Division of HIV Prevention (DHP) has been a leader in informing providers and program staff when it comes to HIV prevention through respective guidelines. Yet, DHP's understanding of the awareness and use of HIV-related guidelines has been limited. There have been few efforts and resources dedicated to assessing and evaluating guideline implementation. With DHP's impending completion and publication of the HIV self-testing and updated HIV testing guidelines in 2024, this project proposes a mixed methods approach to evaluate the awareness and uptake of these guidelines by providers using quantitative and qualitative methods. These providers include those who
