SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

I. Abstract

The U.S. Census Bureau plans to request a 3-year extension with revisions from the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) for the Business Trends and Outlook Survey (BTOS). The BTOS has produced data products on a bi-weekly basis since October 2022. This continuous near real time data collection and publication provides a baseline of the U.S. economy and measures change as a result of current and future economic shocks.

BTOS uses ongoing data collection to produce high frequency, timely, and granular information about current economic conditions and trends. BTOS is the only biweekly business tendency survey produced by the federal statistical system, providing unique and detailed data during times of economic or other emergencies. The BTOS target population is all nonfarm employer businesses with receipts of $1,000 or more in the United States, the District of Columbia, and Puerto Rico. The current sample consists of approximately 1.2 million businesses divided into six panels. A new sample collection is conducted each year. Data collection occurs every two weeks, and businesses in each panel are asked to report once every 12 weeks for one year. Data are released every 2 weeks and are available by 2017 North American Industry Classification System (NAICS) sector, state, the 25 most populous Metropolitan Statistical Areas and employment size. Data are also available by subsector (3-digit NAICS) and sector by employment size.

Data from BTOS are currently used to provide timely data to understand the economic conditions being experienced by businesses; BTOS provides near real time data on key items such as revenue, paid employees, hours worked as well as inventories. BTOS also provides high level information on the changing share of businesses facing difficulties stemming from supply chain issues, interest rate changes, and/or weather-related events. Previously, there had been few data sources available to policymakers, media outlets, and academia that delivered near real time insights into economic trends and outlooks. BTOS data has consistently been used by the Small Business Administration to evaluate the impact of regulatory changes.

The BTOS collects the following high-level topics for the previous two weeks, and the items in bold have 6-month future projections:

- Overall performance
- Revenue
- Employment
- Hours worked
- Artificial Intelligence
- Operating status
- Inventories
- Delivery time
- Demand
- Output prices
- Input prices
- Interest Rates
- Loss—Weather Event

For the first year of BTOS, the content remained unchanged at 26 questions. For the second sample year, the BTOS moved to a set of core questions and supplemental content. Supplemental content is designed to provide urgently needed data on an emerging or current issue. For the first collection of supplemental content, the topic was on business use of artificial intelligence. Due to vast demand to continue this data series, the Census Bureau plans to request a revision to include the artificial intelligence supplement again for the fourth sample year of BTOS.

BTOS data is collected in near real time and disseminated as experimental products. BTOS data is experimental with the goal of meeting Census Bureau quality standards for regularly occurring, non-experimental statistics.

II. Method of Collection

The first time each biweekly panel is in sample, businesses are contacted either by email or letter with an invitation to respond to the survey. For each biweekly survey panel, initial letters are sent on the Friday before the 2-week period while initial emails are sent on the first Monday of the 2-week period. Starting with the second time each biweekly panel is in sample, businesses are contacted only by email with an invitation to respond to the survey. Both letter and email invitations describe the purpose of the survey collection, include the link to the online reporting tool, and contain the access code.
